

Thief captured by GPS technology!

PLUMBING COMPANY RECOVERS $50,000

Earlier this year one of Salmon Plumbing's fleet of vans was stolen from their premises in West End. The vehicle, fitted with the Navman Fleet Management System was located, with the offender in custody, and $50,000 worth of vehicle and stock safely retrieved all within the space of an hour.

Within weeks of FleetlinkGPS implementing the system to help manage their plumbing vehicles, owner John Salmon extended the system into another arm of his business, Salmon Tanks.

The system enables Salmon Plumbing to retain visibility of their working fleet throughout the day; report historically on vehicle activities; and send jobs out to plumbers in the field, who at the push of a button can automatically navigate themselves to the next site.

"It's really handy for the guys, they don't have to pull over to the side of the road to write down the job details and look up the address any more. It saves them time, & it's a safer & more accurate way to send & receive job details," John said.

Salmon Plumbing can now stay connected and retain control of their vehicles once they leave the office and go out to earn revenue for the business. Since installing the system John has found he has been able to increase productivity, improve customer service, and reduce operating costs.

"The system certainly pays for itself. You pick up a few bucks here and there, multiply it across a few guys and it quickly adds up." FleetlinkGPS has a dedicated personal customer support team, whose training & implementation process is second to none, ensuring any business derives maximum benefit from the Navman system.
